LORE

Ramrats are large, chunky rats that plague Estaria. They're a straight hybrid of a giant rat and a ram, sporting sharp teeth, big horns, and exceptionally thick skulls. They're known for ramming, headbutting, and biting other creatures in self-defense, and are notorious for being territorial. When starving, a Ramrat's eyes turn red, and they become increasingly aggressive.

Like most vermin, Ramrats can be found in cool, dark places like caves, sewers, and cellars. However, Ramrats aren't afraid of venturing off into the wild and can also be found in deserts, grassy areas or woodlands. They eat other small vermin, insects, carrion, and sometimes grass.

Ramrats are basic, chubby vermin about the size of a large dog. Their biggest strength is their head, as they're biologically designed to use it as a bashing weapon. Due to their genetic design, Ramrats are immune to Stun.

APPEARANCE

Ramrats are giant rats that have a few ram-like characteristics; most notably their big horns and tough heads. Other than that, they have feet, claws, tails, and fur like a normal rat would. They vary in colors, from black, gray, brown, and sometimes white.

As for weapons, Ramrats use their horns, teeth, and claws as melee weapons. As for ranged weapons, they're able to crunch their own teeth up and spit them out as projectiles.

COMBAT BEHAVIOR

Ramrats are fighters that will attack the nearest target. They will very rarely use their ranged attacks unless they have to.
